

Dogs are often referred to as "man's best friend." They are loyal, loving, and protective companions.

Many people consider their dogs to be part of the family. Dogs have been bred for thousands of years to be loyal to their human companions.

They are natural protectors and will guard their family against anything they perceive as a threat. Dogs will also go above and beyond to please their owners.

They are truly man's best friend. If a dog is well-trained, he can be a loyal and obedient companion for life. Dog trainers often say that it is much easier to train a dog than it is to train a human.

-
1. What are some of the qualities that make dogs man's best friend?
 2. How do people treat dogs?
 3. Why do humans choose dogs?
 4. What do dog trainers say about dogs?