Don't Put All Your Eggs in One Basket.

Once upon a time in a beautiful village there were two best friends named Lily and Rose. They did everything together! One day, They were doing a school project on plant anatomy.

So, they went to pick flowers in the meadow near their homes. Rose saw a beautiful pink flower and ran over to pick it. Lily saw a yellow flower and ran over to pick it. Suddenly, they both realized that they had different flowers in their hands! They looked at each other in confusion and then started to laugh.

They completed their project and got an A+. From then on, whenever they saw a flower, they would think of each other and smile.

The value of a friendship does not lie in the similarity of people, but in the differences that make each person special.

When I was younger, I loved going to the library. It was always so exciting to explore the shelves and find new books to read. I would spend hours looking for the perfect story, and then I would check it out and bring it home. My parents used to tell me that reading was very important, and I believed them.

Now that I am older, I understand that reading is not just important, it is essential. It helps us to learn about the world around us and to expand our horizons. Reading also helps improve our critical thinking skills and our ability to express ourselves. In short, reading is one of the most important things we can do in our lives. And yet, despite its importance, many people never take the time to read for pleasure. I hope that everyone can find at least one story that they love as much as I love mine. Stories have the power to change our lives in ways we never thought possible.

1. What is the my favorite pastime?
2. Who had told me that reading was important?
3. What type of book I searched for in library?
4. How stories can change our lives?
5. What is the importance of reading?
6. What are some of your favorite stories?
7. How has reading changed my life?

It was a beautiful day. The sun was shining and the birds were singing. Tommy and his best friend Molly were playing in a ground near the school. They were having so much fun that they didn't notice the time. Suddenly, they heard the school bell ringing. They knew they were late for class!

They ran as fast as they could, but when they got to the school, the door was already locked. They had never been late for class before and they didn't know what to do. Suddenly, they saw the school principal coming towards them.

The principal knew that they both are good in study and manners. He said, "I'll let you in, but you have to promise to be good from now on." They promised and went into the school. When they got to their classroom, their teacher wasn't there. But soon she came in with a big smile on her face. She said, "I'm sorry I'm late, but I've been waiting for you." Tommy and Molly were so surprised and happy that they had made it to class on time after all!

1. What were the friends doing before going to school?
2. What did the principal say to them?
3. What happened when they got to their classroom?
4. What made Tommy and Molly late for school?
5. How did the school principal react?
6. How did Tommy and Molly feel when they realized they had made it to class on time?

Once upon a time, there was a group of animals who lived in a little forest. They were always searching for ways to be happier and more content with their lives. The deer searched for the tastiest leaves to eat. The rabbits hopped around looking for the softest places to rest. The birds flew high in search of the ripest berries. And every day, they compared their findings with each other.

"I found the sweetest clover today!" said one rabbit.

"Well, I found a patch of grass that's even softer!" said another. "That's nothing," chirped a bird, "I found a bush loaded with ripe berries!"

The animals were so caught up in their quest for happiness that they didn't even realize they were already surrounded by it. The forest had everything they needed. They had food, shelter, and each other—everything they needed to be happy. But it wasn't until they stopped searching that they finally realized it.

Always Appreciate the little things in life and be grateful for what you have, because that's what will ultimately make you happy.

1. What were they always searching for?
2. How did they compare their findings?
3. What did the animals finally realize?
4. Why is it important to appreciate the little things in life?
5. What does the story teach us about happiness?
