

The Legend of Draco, King of the Castle.

Bedtime Story

Once upon a time, there lived a brave and noble dragon named Draco. He lived in a magical kingdom far away, where dragons were revered and respected.

One day, Draco was flying high in the sky when he spotted a beautiful castle in the distance. He flew closer to investigate and soon realized that the castle was in danger.

A group of evil dragons had taken over the castle and were terrorizing the people who lived there.

Draco knew he had to do something to help. He flew down to the castle and used his powerful fire breath to drive away the evil dragons. The people of the castle were so grateful that they invited Draco to stay with them.

Draco accepted their invitation and soon became a beloved member of the castle. Every night, he would tell the children of the castle bedtime stories about brave dragons and their adventures.

The children loved Draco's stories and would beg him to tell them more. Draco was happy to oblige and soon became known as the best storyteller in the kingdom.

The people of the castle were so grateful to Draco for saving them that they made him their king. Draco ruled the kingdom with kindness and justice, and the people of the kingdom lived happily ever after.
